FROM THE RABBI

Only one person, Adam, was created for the sake of peace among humanity, so that no one should say, 'My parents are greater than yours.'

Mishnah Sanhedrin 4:5

A Kentucky teacher found our website (thanks for making it so beautiful, Chad!) and sent a message asking for a speaker on Judaism to round out their two units on "Old Testament" and Jewish Culture. I always enjoy speaking in schools so I answered, "Sure. How many students and how much time?" When he answered 200 for 2 hours I figured I needed help. No way was I going to try to be interesting to that many kids for that long.

Inspiration struck and I sent out a HELP email to a dozen or so folks I thought might be able to take a few hours in the middle of the day. A couple said they'd love to, but were busy that day. Five others agreed to come. Thanks to David Glick, Chad Greene, Leah Levy, Tom Pressman and Rose Riter. For 45 minutes they sat on stage and were real-life Jews while I waxed academical. If I was explaining about the rules of keeping kosher, for example, we could then bring it into the real world and see what people actually did. One question involved deer, which is theoretically kosher, but you have to kill it by slitting its throat without wounding it first for it to be kosher. Then I turned to the panel and asked who would eat venison a neighbor had shot. They raised their hands or made comments to explain why or why not.

THEN we split up into classrooms and each group got its very own Jew to listen to and question! There was a caveat that any question the speaker didn't feel comfortable answering should be sent to me in an email later. That way nobody had to be an expert in Judaism, just in how he or she lived it. The children were very attentive and polite and friendly even, once we got into the smaller groups. We all had a great experience.

A couple of weeks ago I read all the thank you notes they sent. Here is one:

Dear Rabbi Jean,

Thank you so much for coming to Boyd County Middle School. It was an honor and really fun. You were so enthusiastic and funny. I thought that Jews were really different than us, but you guys were really fun. I thought the Torah was amazing! It was so big!

Thanks again

The opening quote from the Mishnah (200 CE Jewish text which is the basis of the Talmud) continues:

Also each person shows the greatness of the Holy Blessed One, for when we strike many coins from one mold they are all the same. However, the Holy Blessed One made each person in the image of the first person, yet none of them resemble each other.

It is important to continually remind ourselves and each other that no group is better than any other – that we are all family, so to speak – and that each of us is unique. I think the Boyd County Middle School students were reminded of that on our visit. Let me know if you want me to call you to help next time!

B'Shalom,

Rabbi Jean E. Eglinton

As he prepares to join the Israeli army Joseph discovers he is not his parents' biological son, but that he was inadvertently switched at birth with Yassin, the son of a Palestinian family from the West Bank.

We will watch it while it while we eat brunch.

Malinda Cains

Mcains@zoominternet.net

To B'nai Sholom Congregation, Temple Youth Group, and Mitch Klein,

The Boys and Girls Clubs of Huntington serve predominantly poor or "at risk" youth. Our purpose is to enable all young people, especially those who need us most, to reach their full potential as productive, caring responsible citizens.

The Temple's donation of 80 Thanksgiving Baskets to our organization is a mitzvah. This generous gift helped to support a program that focuses on the well-being and nurturance of hundreds of underprivileged children each year. Your gift was undoubtedly the only Thanksgiving food that some of our children would have had during the holiday.

Children need a strong support system to grow and mature into responsible citizens. The Temple is now part of that support system; a group of caring individuals who understand the significance the Club has on Huntington's youth. The children you have chosen to support need you and are thankful.

On behalf of the staff, the Board of Directors, the children of the Boys and Girls Clubs, and myself, we thank you.

Sincerely,
Mike Patick
Executive Director

Thank you to all who contributed to the Temple in honor of us for our special day of celebration.

With love and appreciation

HELPING AMANDA THROUGH MARSHALL

Many of us have benefited from Amanda White's reading Torah and preparing a drash (a commentary on the Torah reading). I have always been really pleased that there are people who will lead services in my absence. That's the way it should be. And now in addition, we also have Torah being read on Friday nights and Saturday mornings whether I am here or not, thanks to Amanda.

Someone asked why Amanda wasn't in rabbinic school. It turns out that she had to drop out of Marshall for financial reasons. Some of us have started making contributions to help her back into the game. Diane Shattls, Mitch Klein, and I are her advisory team. Though she may go to rabbinic school someday, Amanda realizes the extent of that commitment and wants to make sure her Bachelor's Degree is useful. She has changed her major from Journalism to Biomedical Sciences. If you would like to contribute to this effort please tell me.

By the way, if you or someone you know in the congregation is in need of modest financial assistance, do let me know, and we will see what can be done. It can be just between you and me. In Amanda's case she decided it was alright to make it public.

B'shalom, praying and working for wholeness and fulfillment for each of us and for all the world,
Rabbi Jean

Happy New Year!

It's fun being Jewish and celebrating a new year twice.

This year the shop chicks made several New Year
resolutions for you!

Wow!!! That takes the pressure off, doesn't it?

Let's start with the easy oft used ones you do
each year:

Eat healthy;

Exercise;

Lose weight; and

Stop smoking (just a few of us).

Most of these are in reference to physical goals. Now, let's list some spiritual and emotional achievements:

*Buy Shabbat candles and light them regularly;

*Buy the various holiday accoutrements and think as you use them, e.g. the strength of the story of Hanukah or the harrowing exodus of Passover;

*Read the Jewish books in our shop and in the Temple library,
Read them to your children;

*Drape your neck with a Star of David, chai or mezuzah.
They will hang near your heart.

These are just a few of the chicks' resolutions (or revolutions as we call them).

We hope you choose them all.

Wishing you a blessed New Year - - -the Shop Chicks.

Last, but not least, when it's gone . . . it's gone . . . except your free kiss which is always available.

Stained Glass Window of Abraham: A Family Essay

B'nai Sholom Temple Huntington, WV

By Tony Broh

Adolph and Jetta Broh, the names accompanying the stained glass window of the Patriarch Abraham, were the patriarch and matriarch of the Broh family that resided in Huntington beginning in the early 1880s.

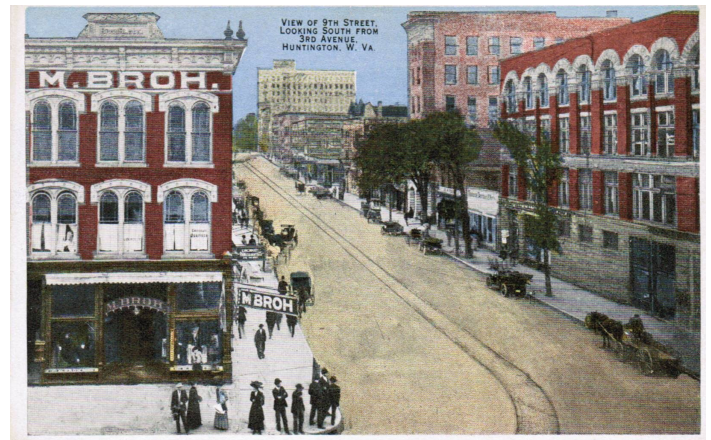

In the tradition of large families, they had ten children who all lived in Huntington at some point in their lives. In the 1895 photograph to the left, Adolph is second from the left and Jetta is second from the right in the front row. Two of their sons, Mike Broh and Julius Broh, were founding members of Ohev Sholom congregation. Mike is in the second row, far left and Julius is third from left in the second row.

Adolph Broh emigrated from Germany shortly after the uprising in 1848, arriving in the United States as a teenager. He was a soldier in the Confederate Army and wounded in the Battle of Shiloh. He married Henrietta “Jetta” Rose in Cincinnati in 1863 and began the family of ten children shown in the photograph. Adolph worked in the clothing business and set up each of his children in clothing stores up and down the Ohio River. The 1900 census counted my grandfather and his brother-in-law, Ed Meyerson and wife of Rose Broh (second from right in the second row), as managers of Broh Clothing in Parkersburg. Locally, the Broh Clothing Company, owned by Mike Broh, was on the southeast corner of 9th Street and Third Avenue. It is one of the buildings that was recently renovated and has the same appearance as this post card from the Nineteen-teens -- judging the date from the dress and the cars.

The building was constructed in 1885 and is the oldest existing commercial building in Huntington. When I was a child in the 1950’s, the sidewalk on 9th Street had a brass inlay with the words “Broh Bros.” AT&T wireless is on the first floor of the building today.

The building on the right in the post card today houses the Marshall Hall of Fame Cafe. It was originally built by Sam Gideon, another founder of Ohev Sholom Temple. Sam Gideon’s daughter, Ida, married Mike Broh. I like to think of the two buildings on each side of the 9th Street mall area as a Shabbat bride and groom standing proudly in the heart of downtown Huntington. And as evidence of their entrepreneurial spirit, one can drive out Hal Greer Boulevard a few miles past the entrance to Interstate 64 and see a barn that advertises Sam Gideon’s store.

Adolph and Jetta Broh are buried in Springhill Cemetery in the large family plot sitting atop the hill in the old part of the Reform Jewish section. Their gravestone is the only upright stone in the Broh plot.

Both of my grandparents, Eph and Irene, are buried there as is my cousin Bob aside his parents. Mike Broh and Julius Broh built their own mausoleums (visible in the film, "We Are Marshall") for their burial sites.

My mother is also buried in the Ohev Sholom section not far from others in the family. Her death in 2012 ended the 130 years of a Broh residing in Huntington. Springhill will be the final resting place for my brother and for me – Broh brothers whose great-grandparents' names are memorialized so fittingly with the image of Abraham. We are all the children of Abraham.
