FROM THE RABBI

WHAT'S IN A BUILDING? WHAT'S IN ITS NAME?

Historically, American Reform Jews have called their building a temple, Conservative Jews a synagogue. Since I've been here I have fiddled in my mind with what would be the best thing to call our building – keeping in mind that we belong to both movements. Of course there are reasons to use one word or another. Here is a quick rundown of the words often used for a congregation's building

- Synagogue – from the Greek, meaning “assembly” – used by many American and European Jews to distinguish their building from the ancient Temple in Jerusalem.
- Temple – used by many American Jews to imply that their building replaces the ancient Temple in Jerusalem. (Interesting aside The English word we use for that holy place, Temple, comes from the Latin, meaning “space for a soothsayer.”)
- Beit haMikdash – Hebrew word used for the ancient Temple in Jerusalem which means “The House of the Holy place.” In the Temple in Jerusalem the Levites sang some Psalms and recited some prayers, but the main focus was the offering of plant and animal sacrifices. It was later envisioned as the place where heaven and earth connected, the navel of the world.
- Beit kneset – Hebrew word for synagogue. It means “house of gathering.” You may recognize the word for the Israeli Parliament in that phrase Knesset means “gathering.” The function of our building is threefold. It is meant to be a beit tefilah, “a house of prayer;” a beit midrash, “a house of study;” AND a beit kneset, a house of gathering,” which has often referred to its function as a social welfare agency. This is a different set of functions than the Temple in Jerusalem in former days.
- Shul – Yiddish word derived from the German, meaning “school” – used to emphasize the function of a building as a place of study.

Since I've been studying Talmud, which often has polemics against Greek culture, I haven't been so keen on the word “synagogue.” “Temple” also has started to irritate me as there are churches that call themselves “temple.” It is just not very descriptive. I like “shul” – except that I think it overemphasizes the function of studying.

I actually like beit kneset, house of gathering, the best. After all, it is the main place we gather. Once we are here we may do any number of things pray and sing in a service, socialize and eat at an Oneg, cook food for each other, discuss the affairs of the community, do a social action project like our Thanksgiving baskets, study together, or any of a number of other actions. I love that it is a Hebrew phrase, the rebirth of Hebrew as a living language being one of the most amazing miracles of the modern age. Though I have every intention of remaining a Diaspora Jew, I am viscerally attached to Israel and to Hebrew. They are in my kishkes.

I'm going to start using beit kneset to refer to our building. Feel free to ask me to remind you what it means and why I am using it. And let's all gather together there soon. How about Shabbat?

Happy Secular New Year!
Rabbi Jean E. Eglinton

FRIDAY NIGHT SERVICES AT
6:00pm THROUGH JANUARY
(as well as the first week of February)

So far we have had 3 Friday night services at 6:00 pm. They have all been well attended, mostly by the "Friday night regulars," as we sometimes call ourselves. December is a month full of people traveling, so we are extending the 6:00 pm trial service time through January and the first week of February for Tu BiShvat – possibly even through February. Please make your preferences known as we get toward the end of January so we will know whether to keep going or not!

Do you like beginning Shabbat at an earlier time?

Do you like it only for the winter months or all year 'round?

Would 6:30 pm be a better time?

Would you prefer to go back to 7:30 pm?

Happy New Year!

Wishing you a blessed New Year - - -the Shop Chicks.

Wow! Did Chanukah seem particularly long to you this year?

Well it did to the shop ladies. Nevertheless, we have decided to extend this 8 day holiday for another month. Silly? Not to us.

In January, we will be giving a 15% discount to anyone buying Chanukah items. The reasons are two-fold.

First, if you celebrated this year, there's a good chance you'll be celebrating again next year. Second, the more you buy, the less we have to put away. Win Win.

If you are so over the menorah holiday, come in anyway and pick up our new cheese boards, dresser trays and pillows or any Judacia. As always, kisses are free.

Happy New Year. Good shopping from the shop ladies.

They are $15.00 and the proceeds benefit Faith In Action, a faith-based volunteer organization that "fills the gaps" where agencies and families cannot meet the simple daily needs that allow the frail elderly, the chronically ill, and persons with disabilities to live independently.
