From the Rabbi

Spiritual needs may be more elevated than material needs, but the material needs of another are an obligation of my spiritual life.

Rabbi Israel Salanter

Remember the High Holy Day Food Drive? We made it last for over fifty days – from the first of Elul through Simchat Torah. All those barrels of food we collected for the local food bank! We sure got into the habit of bringing a can of food every time we came to temple. The main point of doing a food drive that way is that it gets the issue of hunger into our awareness on a regular basis. And into our routine. That is no small thing. (And get ready to do it again in a couple of months – the first of Elul is a Shabbat this year: August 15!)

When the fifty days of the Omer came along – seven weeks of winding our way from Passover to Shavuot, from Freedom to Sinai – we decided to MAKE THE OMER COUNT. We have a special Omer Calendar for the purpose. Each day I would recite the blessing and color in the day. Once a week we would tote up our donations and note our total. The goal was for every household to contribute.

Cash is more efficient than cans. Barrels of random cans and packages have to be sorted before the food can be distributed. The food bank has arrangements with local vendors – from Walmart to the farmers' cooperative – to buy large quantities of cans and fresh produce at highly reduced rates. Of course the cash is also needed to pay their workers and maintain their facilities and to get the food from the warehouse to the pantries – both stationary and mobile – where hungry people can actually get access to it. Summer is historically a dry time in terms of contributions and a high need time, as children are out of school and have lost access to food they count on there.

One of the practices associated with Counting the Omer is to use the time for personal spiritual growth. Rabbi Israel Salanter, one of the masters of Mussar – of the Jewish discipline of spiritual development – had this to say (quoted in Alan Morinis's book Everyday Holiness): "Spiritual needs may be more elevated than material needs, BUT the MATERIAL needs of ANOTHER are an obligation of MY SPIRITUAL life." (emphasis mine)

This spring our spiritual practice has been counting money for the food bank along with counting the days of the Omer. We don't have every household participating. Not yet. We hope to go from season to season, from strength to strength, learning more about local food issues and becoming an active part of fighting hunger in our area. One step at a time.

This year we are sending over $2300 to the Facing Hunger Foodbank. Thank you to everyone who made the Omer Count this year at B'nai Sholom.

Rabbi Jean E. Eglinton

Traveling Jew Appreciates How B'nai Sholom Made Him Feel Welcome

"Your Shul Was a Wonderfully Hamish Experience and Brought Tears To My Eyes"

Hi,

5/11/15

I want to let you know how much I appreciated your synagogue this past Shabbos. I was traveling on business to Ashland and needed a place to say Kaddish for my recently departed dad. My dad used to travel and I remember his adventures in trying to find a divan.

It all came home to me. Your shul was a wonderfully Hamish experience and brought tears to my eyes. I appreciate your taking me in and making me feel like I was one of the congregation. I will always remember that experience.

'Til we see each other again.

Pat Johnson wishes to thank everyone who sent cards or food, called, kept her in your thoughts and prayers or helped her in anyway during her knee surgery recovery. She is very appreciative of all offers of help as well, even if she didn't take you up on it. She is very thankful for all of her friends at B'nai Sholom and hopes to be getting around better soon.

RUMMAGE

Due to our rummage room at the Temple being completely full, Sisterhood is asking that everyone temporarily halt bringing rummage to the Temple until we find a solution to the problem.

We will inform everyone as soon as we find a way to store the rummage. Thank you.

SIMCHAS & TCHOTCHKES

Wow!! June is the month for lots of shopping....

1. Graduations
2. Weddings
3. Father's Day
4. New houses
5. New babies
6. Old babies (normal birthdays)
7. Get well quicks

The list goes on and on but luckily for you, the Shop Chicks have chosen not to list the nine additional reasons that we came up with! Hint Some were x-rated.

Simchas & Tchotchkes is the place to find all the gifts you may need (including the x-rated ones). The shelves are glistening with the sparkle of glass, the shimmer of silver and the glow of goodies.

We have new and traditional Judaica to meet all your needs. And we have generic and/or gentile items to meet all your other needs.

If you don't think you need anything, stop in the shop and we will convince you otherwise.

Yes, we have cards for every occasion too!

Remember, when it's gone, it's gone!!!
Kisses are always free.
