FROM THE RABBI

IT IS A TREE OF LIFE Proverbs 3:18

About 30 years ago a teenager from Ecuador came with his family to the United States. He studied engineering in New Jersey, but it wasn't everything he was hoping. So he moved to Israel and became a rabbi. Then, back in the States, he became a sofer, a Torah Scribe. Rabbi Salazar is now an expert in Torah restoration. Thanks to the financial help of Herb and Betty Colker, we were able to bring him to B'nai Sholom for a day in October. He taught us about sifrei Torah – about Torah scrolls – in general, and about ours in particular.

The oldest one in our care is a 150-year-old Czech scroll. It is also the tallest by far. It is the one we used to keep in the museum room and is now in the Ark. Look in the upper right hand corner of the accompanying photo. See the letter with the spiral inside it? The letter is called “peh” and this one has another “peh” written inside of it. The names of all the Hebrew letters mean something. “Peh” means “mouth” in Hebrew. Think back to the first creation story: God created by speaking. Rabbi Salazar taught us that this mouth within a mouth refers to God’s creative power and to the understanding that it is ongoing. God did not just create the world and leave it to its own devices, but is continually helping to create it anew every day. As we say in our morning prayer, “You daily renew creation.”

The fancy “peh” shows this scroll was written following the traditions of the MaHaRal, Moreinu (our teacher) HaRav Loew, Rabbi Judah Loew of Prague of the 16th century. There is a legend that he made a golem, a giant man out of clay. He brought the golem to life to defend the Jewish ghetto from attack. What has more historical documentation is that he wrote extensively on kabbalah, Jewish mysticism. He couched his ideas in philosophical terms to make it more understandable to non-scholars.

We also have two sifrei Torah written by Sephardic scribes in Israel, two from Germany, two from Russia, and one from Poland. All of this the rabbi could tell us from the characteristics of certain letters. One of the Israeli scrolls was bought in honor of Samuel Samson, President of Ohav Sholom in the 1930's. One of the Russian/Ukrainian scrolls was bought by Joseph Cohen. If anyone knows who he was, we should add that information to our data base.

Three of our scrolls are kosher; in other words, all their letters are intact. The other five need minor, or in some cases, major repair. Before Rabbi Salazar comes back to do those repairs, we will be cleaning all of the scrolls in preparation. Any Jew over the age of 13 may participate in the preliminary cleaning. So if you want to get closer to our scrolls and learn the history they can teach us, do come to one of the Holy Roller sessions we are arranging.

Torah is our preliminary connection to generations past, at the root of all our musings. Please come help us begin the repair of these historical and spiritual artifacts!

Rabbi Jean E. Eglinton

The author, raised Catholic in Cuba and then Miami, discusses her search for her family's roots and takes the reader through her thorough genealogy journey that led her to her Jewish roots. The book, about 150 pages long, is available from amazon.com for about $13-15.

Please let us know if your plan to attend, so we can get an idea of how many bagels are needed.

The Cabell Co. Public Library will not be getting this book, but Deedee has left her copy at the Temple Office and congregants can borrow it.

Greetings from the USCJ Centennial Conference in Baltimore....

They called it the conversation of the century, the Centennial conference of the USCJ, United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism's centennial conference and celebration of 100 years since it's founding by Solomon Schechter, then head of the Jewish Theological Seminary in 1913. With 22 founding congregations in the US and Canada, the USCJ has had quite the journey over these 100 years.

The attendees, over 1200 from all parts of the world, had the opportunity to hear from the big names in Conservative Judaism-Rabbi Harold Kushner ("When Bad Things Happen to Good People"), Rabbi Bradley Shavit Artson, and Dr Ron Wolfson ("Relational Judaism") among them, all calling for attention to building and maintaining relationships beyond and outside of the traditional synagogue building. Their addresses are all available on the USCJ website (www.uscj.org, go to the Centenary conference page), and are well worth the visit.

There were almost 90 workshop sessions to choose from, covering a wide variety of topics for congregations big and small (we weren't the smallest-a shul of 50 members came), for singles, couples with and without children, about conversion, Israel and everything else imaginable. Also a lively vendor area (including our new friends, Sofer On Site), with literary, gift shop, music, synagogue design and décor, Israel programs for all ages and synagogue services.

I attended a variety of workshops, particularly about small congregations, merged congregations, what works for attracting and maintaining young members and young members with parents, and non-confrontational methods for sharing divergent perspectives amongst them. With the recent release of the Pew Report on Judaism the US, the Conservative movement seems to grasp that there needs to be a change in the traditional way of our congregational world, and that this is a time to listen and engage.

I was honored to be Bnai Sholom's representative, and hope to bring back the sense of optimism and urgency that the Conservative movement has to make our West Virginia synagogue the best it can be.

Linda Klein
U.S.C.J. representative for B'nai Sholom Congregation

Thanks to Rose B. Aronson, now of Highland Park, IL., for sharing her family memories...

It must have been around 1911 that my grandfather, Harry Cuttler, came to Huntington in response to the Wylie China Company's search for someone to do gold leafing on a commissioned set of china. I don't know where he developed this skill, but he did such a beautiful job that they kept him on. He settled in Huntington and sent to the Ukraine for my grandmother Sophie and the 3 children, Rae, Ann and Jack. They were early members of Huntington's orthodox congregation, B'nai Israel, known to us simply as "the shul." Eventually, the dust in the china factory affected Harry's lungs, and when he had to quit Sophie somehow managed to open a family clothing store at 1917 3rd Avenue – Cuttler's Department Store, which became the family business. At the age of 26, Jack married Ida Melman, the ninth child of Ben and Rosa Melman of Charleston. Ten months later, on 6/13/35, I was born.

Jack and Ida worked tirelessly for the Jewish community. Dad was president of the shul for 20 years and, among many other projects, he oversaw the building of the small sanctuary that was brought over to the Temple when the congregations merged. I'm sure you've seen the plaque with his name. (The merger came after he died.) He was the main fund raiser for the shul and the UJA. He was aware what people could afford to give, told them what they should give, and though some argued with him, in the end they did. He also raised money for Israel and for his dedication was awarded the Prime Minister's Medal. My dad was a quiet man, kind and wise and practical and the person everyone brought their problems to. A man of modest means himself, if anyone in the community was in need, my dad found a way to help them. The shul's rabbi, Jacob Danziger, was one of my dad's closest friends. The rabbi's son, Harry, was like a little brother. He is now rabbi emeritus of a large Reform congregation in Memphis. (My dad once told me his most important job as president was to protect the rabbi. My mother, Ida, lived to the age of 93. Even though she worked in the store alongside my dad, over the years she served as president of Hadassah and president of the Sisterhood, was always on some committee, and at the age of 90 still took a calling list for donations. The last two years of her life she was home bound, unable to attend services or meetings, and I was quite hurt on her behalf at how the Jewish community simply forgot her.

Jack's sister, Rae, married Isador Jaffe of New York. They moved to Huntington in the late 1940's and Rae opened a beautiful little shop downtown – The Milady Shop. Their only daughter, Lillian, married Ted Eiland of Logan. Jack's sister, Ann, never married. She graduated from Marshall and worked as a reporter for newspapers, first in Cincinnati and then New York City. She became a very successful freelance journalist writing for leading magazines and had some interesting books published. Harry, Sophie, Jack, Ida and Ann Cuttler, Rae (Cuttler) and Isador Jaffe, and Lillian and Ted Eiland are all buried in the Huntington Cemetery. As for me, after graduating from Huntington High, I went off to Northwestern University where I met Bob, a Chicagoan. Rabbi Danziger married us in 1956, and I graduated from NU in '57. We have 3 children and 5 grandchildren all of whom loved Ritter Park and climbing the hills – a treat for kids from the flatlands of Illinois.

A little high school story will remind you of what things were like growing up in WV in the 40's and 50's. I graduated from HHS in June, 1953 where I had been a good student and active in everything. Every year the DAR awarded their medal to the outstanding senior girl. I thought I was deserving of the medal but knew I didn't have a chance as it was well known, without anyone actually saying it out loud, that the DAR was anti-Semitic, (probably anti any minority). So, imagine my pride at being the first Jewish student to get the medal. Later, the school secretary who was a neighbor of ours told my mother the story. It seems when the DAR representative called Mr. Brewer, the principal, to see whose name to put on the medal, he gave her my name. She told him that was not acceptable, and he told her that either they would give it to me or to no one. Mr. T. S. Brewer, who I hardly knew, became my hero.

With all best wishes,

Rose

President's Message

Lately, my computer in-box has been flooded with emails. They were not the usual recipes, jokes or even videos. Instead they contained the results of the recently released Pew study called "A Portrait of Jewish Americans", conducted by the Pew Research Center. Sadly, the study revealed, Jews are becoming less.....and less.....and less Jewish. "We are drifting away from religion," it reported, just like Sandra Bullock and George Clooney who drifted away from the space station in the movie I recently saw called "Gravity". So my question to you is, "Should we as Jews feel panic?" Some say yes and some say no.

Sure, like the American Jewish community, I feel worried about the results of the study, but I don't feel panic. The report confirms many things that we already knew, but in addition also gives us facts that I found to be unexpected. Following are just a few of the findings the Pew's Jewish poll revealed about people who identify as cultural Jews or as religious Jews:

1. The American Jewish population turns out to be larger than expected, coming in at 6.8 million rather than the previous estimates of 6 million or less. So, the Jewish population isn't shrinking, which I consider to be good news.
2. Reform Judaism is the largest identified group of Jews. The percentage of Conservative Jews was much smaller and the Orthodox Jews even smaller.
3. Most (61%) of the Jews who do intermarry were found to be raising their children as Jewish or partly Jewish, rather than in another religion.
4. About four-in-ten U.S. Jewish households say they belong to a temple/synagogue. The younger generations, even though proud of their Jewish identity, have moved away from traditional models of belonging. They want to embrace the cultural part of Judaism verses the religious part.
5. Jews overwhelmingly say they are proud to be Jewish and have a strong sense of belonging to the Jewish people.
6. Jewish identity is changing in America, where one-in-five Jews now describe themselves as having no religion.

True, if you read the entire Pew study, it does present real and serious challenges for the Jewish people as a whole. Remember though, we Jews still represent 2.2% of the growing population of the United States. So the thought of our demise or shrinkage seems impossible, especially for a religion that has existed for 3500 years. To me, the real emerging question, based on our strengths and diversities, is.... how do we take full advantage of what we learned from the study and put it to good use? The writing on the wall says we need to adjust the Jewish landscape, making it more appealing and accessible to as many Jews as possible. If we don't, we could find ourselves in panic mode, just like Sandra Bullock when her tether snapped and left her flipping aimlessly through space. Obviously, we the Jews of America, need to roll up our sleeves and get to work!
